

What is the DVIRC?

The Domestic Violence Information and Referral Center (DVIRC) originated as a collaborative effort of the Domestic Violence Agencies in the 9 San Francisco Bay Area counties. As an online interactive community network, the DVIRC provides a safe space for member domestic violence service providers to share, network, and access updated information so that effective and appropriate resources and referrals can be offered to domestic violence survivors.

The project was developed by W.O.M.A.N., Inc. and Force by Design. It has been funded by the Strong Field Project (jointly funded by the Women's Foundation of California and Blue Shield Against Violence Program), the Verizon Foundation, the Blue Shield Foundation of California, and the David B. Gold Foundation.

Here's What Members of the DVIRC Community Are Saying About it:

“Usually clients needing shelter need to make multiple calls to many shelters to determine if bed space is available. With the DVIRC, we are able to give clients a list of shelters with possible space, saving them the time and frustration of calling every shelter in the area.” - Nazgol, Alameda County Family Justice Center

“The DVIRC helps us to increase communication and collaboration in the domestic violence community throughout the state. We are able to share best practices, get training resources, and have access to many resourceful documents in the community tab.” - Patricia, Next Door Solutions

“The DVIRC is a one stop shop that provides a myriad of information...It is a relief to have immediate online access to continually updated resources.” - Lisa, Shalom Bayit

“I really appreciate this wonderful project which requires a lot of coordination around different community stakeholders and tech. Thanks so much for initiating it!” - DVIRC Survey Respondent, 2014
